

LOUISVILLE JOURNAL. PRENTICE, HENDERSON, & OSBORNE. Green street, between Third and Fourth. TUESDAY, MAY 1, 1896.

WE publish on our first page this morning the address "To the people of Kentucky," signed by a large number of the most prominent and influential citizens of the State, calling for the Thirtieth of May Convention. It is the fourth time since the outbreak of the civil war in our country that the address has been issued. The time is brief between the 30th and 31st, and we would urge the friends of the Address throughout the State to be up and doing. The Convention may be a grand representation of the masses of Kentucky. Let them prepare to hold primary meetings in every county to appoint delegates to the Convention. No time now can be spared or lost.

THE REASON WHY.—Hon. Alexander H. H. Stuart, a member of Congress elected from Virginia and an Old-line Whig, asks a pertinent question of the people of his District, as follows: "Why, with all his advantages, has Virginia never been prosperous?" And he proceeds to answer his own question thus: "Simply because she has been almost exclusively an agricultural State, and has expended all the proceeds of her crops in paying from the North a tremendous debt that she should have made at home. All we receive from our tobacco, wheat, and other agricultural products has been expended in the purchase of goods from other States, and we have thus always been poor."

What has been true of Virginia has been true of every other Southern State as well. They have all been buyers of wool and drawers of water to the North. They have been subservient to the North, and have thus been impoverished. The reason why the South has been impoverished is that it has been almost exclusively an agricultural State, and has expended all the proceeds of its crops in paying from the North a tremendous debt that it should have made at home. All we receive from our tobacco, wheat, and other agricultural products has been expended in the purchase of goods from other States, and we have thus always been poor."

Mr. Stuart is certainly late in making his discovery, if he has just made it. We have been impoverished for years, and have been so for years. The reason why the South has been impoverished is that it has been almost exclusively an agricultural State, and has expended all the proceeds of its crops in paying from the North a tremendous debt that it should have made at home. All we receive from our tobacco, wheat, and other agricultural products has been expended in the purchase of goods from other States, and we have thus always been poor."

LETTER FROM HON. W. CONKLIN. LITCHFIELD, KY., April 28, 1896. To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

In your issue of the 21st instant, I saw my name in a call for a mass meeting, proposed to convene in the city of Louisville on the 30th day of May.

I approve of the meeting if the object is to unite in an effort to expunge the military code from the statute books of the State, and to re-establish the civil policy, and to re-establish the ancient land marks and landmarks, which have almost been obliterated within the last few years by that subversive, "military necessity."

I also approve of an endorsement of the President in his state-military course in opposition to the dominant party in Congress, as evinced by his veto message, and hope Kentucky will support and sustain him in every effort he may make to preserve and maintain the Constitution and civil laws.

I have not signed my name to the call for the mass meeting, nor authorized it to be signed. I cannot find trouble with this communication for one paragraph in the call for the mass meeting, nor find it necessary to make any political meeting—one of which in my county had participated in—the two showing an inconsistency in my action. I can see nothing incompatible in a political and a mass meeting; both may be profitable.

Please give this place in your paper. Your obedient servant, W. CONKLIN.

The name of Mr. Conklin was signed to the address for the 30th of May Convention upon ground that his name appeared in the proceedings of a meeting at Litchfield, called on the 27th of May. All the other names signed to the address were put there by their own authority, and Mr. Conklin's was just added to it upon the ground he had stated.
